Sandy Woodward was aged 50 at this time and was a very well qualified and experienced naval officer. There are sub themes in this book which are conflicts between his concern about individual ships and their crews and the overall purpose of the Task Force. The regular failure of computer systems and missiles is reported and I felt a sense of despair.

One Hundred Days: The Memoirs of the Falklands Battle Group Commander (Bluejacket Books) by Sandy Woodward Admiral Woodward tells us that to succeed, the amphibious landing in the Falklands required at least air power over the landing site, if not air superiority (ala Normandy D-Day). That implied two aircraft carriers: one to provide air cover from enemy troops for the landing troops, the other resist enemy aircraft attacking the landing troops.
